

Motivational Letter

SIOF is one of the most important scientific meetings in pediatric oncology. It is one of the few opportunities where members from all around the globe can meet and exchange ideas. Thus, it is critically important that the science presented at SIOF is of exceptional quality and is clinically relevant for practicing clinicians. Not only would this be a main goal but furthermore, showcasing junior investigators from different countries will be similarly important. I believe that: (1) my experience in leading the Children's Oncology Group's Cancer Control and Supportive Care and Cancer Care Delivery Research Committees; (2) my current position as a supportive care Clinician Scientist; and (3) my extensive network of leading investigators and clinicians across many disciplines, will provide the foundation for ensuring success as SIOF's Scientific Committee Chair.
